

New York State Youth and Government Officer Application

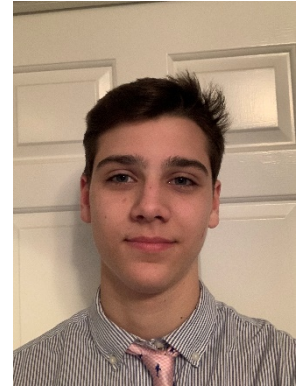

Attorney-General

Sean Geen

Years in Youth and Government: 2

Previous Youth and Government experience and/or other qualifications:

Youth and Government has presented me with great leadership experience over these past few years. For my first year, I was an attorney on Case C, where my partner and I thrived. I realized how important it was to collaborate with those around, and form rapport with all my peers so that I could succeed at Albany. Chosen to be a justice this year. I really took a on a leadership role that helped me form confidence in my abilities. Outside of Youth and Government, I have led service trips, and even helped as a manager at my job. Youth and Government is a platform for me to grow, and I wish grow even more as your Attorney General.

Why are you seeking this office and what do you feel you have to offer your peers if selected as one of their leaders for the coming year?

Being Attorney General is something I have seen and admired in my previous years in Youth and Government. Watching the Attorney General and Public Defender argue cases based on bills is always intriguing. I wish to be a role model for those younger than me, and I believe that becoming Attorney General would be a platform for me not only to help lead, but build a culture that breeds effective leaders for the future.

Define servant leadership and describe how you plan to incorporate this if elected into office:

Being a servant leader is putting others before yourself always. Helping others before yourself is clearly the epitome of being a leader. I wish to be looked up to as one who always aided those in need, before tending to myself. I will make it a point to help new members of the club feel more comfortable and at ease, as Youth and Government can always feel stressful. Putting others first also includes heeding to advice given by others. It is my goal to always listen to the advice of others, and to use that advice to help create an environment that is more comfortable yet focused.
